

BIRMINGHAM

Mail

MONDAY, MARCH 13 2006

www.icbirmingham.co.uk 40p

EDUCATION

Sky's the limit for pupils

BLUE skies will be guaranteed for Birmingham tomorrow when an education roadshow arrives in the city.

The event, which takes place on Tuesday and Wednesday at the Odeon Cinema, in New Street, is designed to inspire more than 1,500 pupils from across Birmingham, including Kings Norton and Yardley.

The Blue Skies Roadshow will give youngsters the opportunity to meet successful business role models and inspire them to become the next generation of business leaders and entrepreneurs. Sessions, which are free, run from 10-11.30am and 1-2.30pm. Schools must register in advance due to the limited number of places available. A spokesman for the roadshow said some of Birmingham's most successful young business people have been invited to meet and talk to the students about business life. They include James Eder, from Studentbeans, Irfan Badakshi, of Bean2Bed, and Tracey Buller, from Funky Feet.

Schools signed up for the event include Bordesley Green, Cockshut Hill Technology College, George Dixon International, Harborne Hill, Heart of England, Kings Norton Girls, Langley, Lordswood Boys, Lordswood Girls, South Birmingham College, Swanshurst, Washwood Heath, and Waverley.